TWO HURT IN CAR CRASH.

Wisconsin Avenue and Pierce Mill Road Scene of Accident.

A northbound street car and a west-bound ice wagon met on the crossing at Wisconsin Avenue and Pierce Mill road yesterday afternoon. The wagon was demolished and the driver, Roland Goodall, 4 Jewett street, and Columbus Gray, his helper, 4559 Wisconsin Avenue, were injured.

Goodall sustained cuts and bruises about his body and face, and was taken to Georgetown University Hospital.

While Gray, who was slightly hurt about the body, refused hospital treatment. The police said the accident probably was caused by the driver being unable to see the car at a distance before reaching the crossing.

MAKE NEEDED GARMENTS FOR BELGIAN CHILDREN

D. C. Relief Committee and Endless Chain Hurry Donations for Shipment July 1.

Members of the District of Columbia Belgian relief committee and the Endless Chain Society met Friday at the residence of Mrs. John A. Logan, 2523 13th street northwest, and made many garments for the destitute Belgians in France. Many unfinished garments were taken home by the women and will be returned in a few days.

Every effort is being made now to ship the collections of the District of Columbia Belgian relief committee by July 1, to reach Mrs. William H. Hill, a member of the Washington committee, who is in charge of a Belgian refugee camp in France, and who has under her immediate care 300 children.

Dr. John C. Wise, medical director, U. S. A. retired, treasurer of the District of Columbia Belgian relief committee, is arranging to send forward $450 worth of milk to the Belgian sufferers in France. This money was raised by the milk committee of the Belgian relief committee. Mrs. John A. Logan, president of the District Belgian relief committee, and Dr. Wise, will send the whole amount at once to Mrs. Hill, as according to the number of persons in this refugee camp composed especially of children, it will not be more than they require.

The members of the "endless chain" hope to see a number of persons interested in this work Friday, June 18, when they are to assemble again at 2523 13th street northwest, and to receive in the meantime contributions of clothing and money.

Mrs. Hill's Diary.

An extract from the diary of Mrs. Hill sent to Mrs. Logan is as follows:

"A group of twenty-one little girls from Flanders, under the care of three Flemish nuns, arrived at the Gare du Nord. We escorted them to the Asile of the Sisters of the Order of St. Vincent."

"At 11 A.M. Monmonstant, where they are to remain for a few days, they may be thoroughly renovated by going on to Versailles, where Mme. de Viel Castel and Mme. de Comtesse d'Ursel have secured a picturesque old church property in which to establish this group of orphans."

"The sisters and the children had left their homes near Dixmude in October, 1914, when they were taken into the hands of troops and cavalry. The children rarely went out of doors and became much weakened by the long months of confinement and the cold, with scarcely enough food to keep them alive."

Privations of Children.

"As I looked into the faces of these children I saw reflected there all the sufferings and privations endured since the flight from the tranquil home in Flanders. The months of fear, ill-nourishment and cold had left their stamp. Three little faces especially attracted my attention, for there I recognized the children who came from some grief far greater than that caused by physical hardship. My attempt to comfort them by the tales of the winter months was averted, and the youngest of the three, about four years of age, sobbed and cried with an expression of pain, even agony."

"Later I learned that those three little girls had been taken from their parents a few days previously, an abus having killed both parents at the same instant."

"The nun who told me this said that little Bertha, the youngest child, had clung to her sobbing all through the long night journey to Paris."

"This is but one example of the many tragedies we are meeting daily as we gather in the 'frontier children.'"

WEATHER.

Fair and Warm Today and Probably Monday.

For the District of Columbia and Maryland, fair and continued warm today and probably Monday; light south and southeast winds, increasing.

The feature of the weather map Saturday night is an intense low pressure area central over Minnesota. It has caused thunderstorms with moderate gales over the upper lakes and in the Missouri valley.

Storm conditions will continue in the upper lake region Sunday, and slowly extended eastward across the lower lakes by Monday.

The temperature will be relatively high in eastern districts and there will be a sharp fall in the upper and middle portions of the Mississippi valley.

Storm warnings are displayed on the upper lakes and on Lake Erie.

The winds along the north Atlantic coast will be mostly light northerly, becoming south light and variable; on the east gulf coast light south to southeast; on the west gulf coast moderate southeast with squalls, becoming northwest Sunday; on the lower lakes strong southeasterly, increasing Sunday afternoon and shifting to northwest Monday, probably with squalls.
